

ABSTRACT

A processing device includes an optimizer to migrate objects from an external memory of a network processing device to registers connected to a processor. The optimizer further aligns and eliminates redundant initialization code of the objects.